Can We Talk?

Does your community have an issue you're struggling with?

Let's talk!

Customized technical assistance is as convenient as a long-distance phone call

Praxis Technical Assistance Partners (TAPs) can help organize a conference call between your program staff and experts on a topic tailored to meet your needs. These calls could also include community partners, allies, or other grantees working on similar projects. Topics might include:

- Enhancing advocacy for immigrant battered women
- Maximizing your Coordinated Community Response (CCR) to create systems change
- Coordinating advocacy and child protection collaborations
- Expanding your Tribal response to battering to include sexual assault
- Incorporating the voices of battered women into policy, curriculum development and program evaluation

There is no expense for Rural grantees to participate in Can We Talk calls other than long-distance charges, eligible for OVW set-aside funds. OVW prior approval is not required.
