An Institute for Supervised Visitation Grantees...

The Practice of Orientation in Supervised Visitation Centers

March 3 - 4, 2010

Miami, Florida

The first interactions by visitation center staff with program participants are powerful moments; they set the stage for the weeks, months, or years ahead when the family will be using the center. This institute will examine how the practice of orientation at a center can be done in ways to help the center:

- Build a foundation for safety
- Develop respectful and fair relationships
- Recognize and meet families' unique needs

Who should attend...

This institute is open to all Supervised Visitation grantees and their project partners. Practitioners both new and experienced are encouraged to attend. This Institute will be a hands-on practice based institute. Communities are encouraged to bring a team that provide both direct service as well as support essential training and critical thinking to further your local efforts in centralizing safety for both adult and child victims into everyday practice.
